DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. Applicant is reminded to update the specification to reflect the status of the parent application.

Election/Restrictions

2. Applicant's election without traverse of claim 3 in the reply filed on 6 Dec 07 is acknowledged.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-3, 9, 17, 19, 33, 34 & 37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fey (Slot Machines, A Pictorial History of the First 100 Years, Liberty Bell Books, 1983) in view of Baerlocher (US Patent Number 6,336,863).

Claims 1, 33: Fey teaches the Reliance slot machine on page 24. The Reliance includes a housing defining a display area. There is at least one indicium representing at least one prize is displayed on the display area (the arrows point to trade checks). There are a plurality of display characters (i.e., arrows) configured to move and configured to indicate the indicium. The Reliance includes a mechanical controller in communication with the at least one of the plurality of display characters and being configured to direct movement thereof. The controller is configured to move the at least one of the plurality of display characters to indicate the at least one indicium that corresponds to the game outcome. The Reliance lacks a computerized controller that is configured to generate a random number and generate a game outcome based on the random number. Baerlocher (along with all modern slot machines) has such a controller (42). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have modified the Reliance in view of Baerlocher to include a computerized controller configured to generate a random number and generate a game outcome based on the random number in order to modernize the Reliance.

Claim 2, 34: The plurality of display characters are three-dimensional. All physical objects are three-dimensional.

Claim 3: According to Wiktionary, “choreographed” means “made to work together”. Clearly, the Reliance’s pointers work together. Thus, the display characters are configured to move in a choreographed manner.

Claims 9, 37: In order to move the arrows, there must be at least one actuator coupled to the at least one of the plurality of display characters and in communication with the controller, wherein the controller is configured to cause the at least one actuator to move the at least one of the plurality of display characters.

Claim 17: The display area comprises a changeable display area and the at least one indicium comprises indicia, wherein at least a portion of the indicia are displayed on the changeable display area. The face of the machine is the display area. Since the arrows move, the display area is changeable. The indicia appear on the display area.

Art Unit: 3714

Claim 19: The display area includes at least one prize display on the display area, wherein indicia are displayed on the prize display. The Reliance & Baerlocher both have the prizes on the display area.

Double Patenting

5. Claims 1-42 of this application conflict with claims 1-19 of Application No. 11/239,784. 37 CFR 1.78(b) provides that when two or more applications filed by the same applicant contain conflicting claims, elimination of such claims from all but one application may be required in the absence of good and sufficient reason for their retention during pendency in more than one application. Applicant is required to either cancel the conflicting claims from all but one application or maintain a clear line of demarcation between the applications. See MPEP § 822.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. See Notice of References Cited.
